YE SONG OF YE GOSSIPS.

Ore old maid,
And another old maid,
And another old maid—three—
And they were a gossiping, I am afraid,
As they sat sipping their tea.

They talked of this,
And they talked of that,
Till everybody was black as your hat,
And the only ones white were they.

One old maid,
And another old maid—
For the third had gone into the street—
Which never would do to repeat.

And now but one
Dance sat all alone,
For the others were all away.
"I've never yet met," she said with a groan,
"Such scandalous talkers as they."

Alas and alack!
What a lot of gossip
For no matter how we walk,
Our feet will stir up a lot of talk.
—Margaret's Young People.

PHOEBE'S TRICK.

"An invitation to the picnic—Burt Williams will be there. How splendid!" Phoebe looked in the glass as she spoke and thought to herself that she was really very pretty, and that she was just the person to grace the Williams mansion as its mistress. "And if I can only have Burt to myself for the day," she thought, "he will surely offer himself. He don't know which he likes best, Lizzie or me. If I could only keep Lizzie from going."

But to keep Lizzie from going would not be so easy. What excuse was there to make to her cousin for wishing her to absent herself from the merry-making?
A sudden thought occurred to Phoebe.
It was a cunning, mean one. She could hide Lizzie's shoes. At that moment Lizzie had just one pair besides her slippers, and her foot was so small that she could not wear those of any other member of the family.

There would not be time to buy a pair, for they were miles from town, and the general store only dealt in rough boots that Lizzie could not wear.
Yes, Phoebe said to herself, "that would keep her at home."

She crept into Lizzie's room, and saw the shoes, with their tops turned over, sat upon the window-sill. Nothing could have favored Phoebe's plan better.
Some trunk would be supposed to have stolen them. She whisked them away in an instant, and, hiding them under her apron, carried them to her own room, and hid them at the bottom of her trunk.

"All is fair in love as in war," she said to herself; but, after all, it was not love for the man, though she thought him handsome, as much as love for his estate. Phoebe was very ambitious, and she was poor living with her aunt and obliged to take everything from her hands. There was, perhaps, some excuse for her wishing to marry well.

Down in the dining room Lizzie was sitting over her needle. She, too, hoped to have Burt Williams at her side all day, and she had really given her heart to him. It would have made no difference to her if he had been a poor mechanic. Instead of Burt Williams with the greatest fortune in the county, she thought he loved her sometimes;
still Phoebe tried hard to out her out, and Phoebe was prouder than she was;
she knew it.

"He would show his preference today," she said and as he behaved on this occasion she would judge of his heart. "If he likes Phoebe best, I will stop thinking of him," she said to herself.

"Come, girls," said her mother, dress yourself, and you can drive you over; and take wraps, for it is sure to be chilly, after dark; and don't sit down by the river—I'm doubtful it's dangerous.
And don't stand in the sun."
But the girls were off before she had done speaking, and in a few moments Lizzie was heard to cry, in a melancholy way, from the head of the stairs:
"Oh, no! I can't find my shoes!"

She felt her cheeks glow, and she was glad that she had not gone to the picnic.

The bees hummed in the garden; the scent of the new-mown hay came up from the pasture.

They sat silent for many moments.
In all her life Lizzie would not forget that happy time.

"Lizzie," said Burt, after awhile, "I suppose you know I love you. I haven't told you so out and out, but I think you must have seen it."

"No, I didn't know; I was not sure," said Lizzie.

"And I'm not at all sure about you, Lizzie," said Burt. "Do you care a little for me? Will you marry me, darling?
I shall be very wretched if you will not."

What Lizzie said did not make Burt wretched.

When Phoebe came home that night she looked cross and dispirited.

"Had a nice time?" asked her aunt.
"No. It was stupid," Lizzie didn't miss much," said Phoebe.

"Why, there now, I rather think she didn't," said Mrs. Miller. "I can't keep it to myself, Phoebe. Pa met Burt Williams and told him she wasn't going, and he called, and they are engaged, Phoebe. Why, it's like a story, isn't it?"

"Yes," said Phoebe; she could not say any more, her anger was too great; and Mrs. Miller shrewdly suspected why.

The next morning Lizzie's shoes were found just under the window.

"Not a bit damp with dew or anything," said Mrs. Miller to herself; but though she had jumped at a pretty correct conclusion as to their disappointment, all had turned out so well for Lizzie that she was generous enough to say nothing to any one.—N. Y. Ledger.

DAMASCUS.

We almost reverence Damascus because of its hoary antiquity, and it is quite the fashion to rush over the Oriental magnificence to be witnessed there—especially if it is the only part of the Orient which you have visited.
But in point of actual fact the magnificence is never seen by passing tourists.
It may lurk in the harems of the sultans, or in the palaces of the sultans, or in the harem of the sultans, or in the question, so far as men are concerned, it may linger in the bazaars, but even these have lost their Orientalism by reason of the presence of Manchester prizes, Lyons silks and fabrics from all the European centers. To the student fresh from Europe or America Damascus might seem very Oriental; to the professional tourist it is decidedly less Oriental than hosts of other places further east. To neither class can Damascus appear magnificent, unless the multitude of shutters, stills, stills his conscience and deliberately stultifies himself in order to be with the majority.
In fact, I am disappointed in Damascus.
There may be magnificent here. I am free to admire the natural magnificence of the place. I am willing also to say that there is a sort of magnificence of interior, for I have had several glimpses of marble fountains, fessiated pavements and spacious Syrian courts.
But there is nothing that could by any extravagance of speech be construed into external magnificence. This is even more true of the Damascus of today than it was of the Damascus that existed prior to the awful massacre and fire of 1860. To be frank, Damascus is a sea of mud hovels and plaster "palaces," that might easily be taken for stables, unbroken save by a score of coarse minarets, the crescent-tipped dome of the great mosque and the forbidding walls of the "castle" at the northwest corner of the city. Even the boasted mosque, for a glimpse at which these modest Moslems are so anxious, must be called tawdry when examined in contrast with those superb monuments of Islam which I saw in India.—

RECESSION AND LUNCHEON.

COAL MINERS TO THE FRONT.
Saturday night the coal miners of the city met at the Eldorado hose house and organized a Republican marching club of 20 to 30 members, which will be increased to 50 for Logan day. The chairman of the meeting was Mr. Russell, who was an earnest advocate of the protective system, as was indicated by his speech. The meeting was addressed by Mr. W. C. Johns. The club will meet at the Washab baggage room this evening at 7:30 o'clock and make a splendid showing in the parade to-morrow night.

THE TRIP TO LINCOLN.
Lincoln, the home of Dick Oglesby, had a big Republican demonstration on Saturday afternoon and night, to which the Decatur special train contributed a delegation of 400 torch-bearers, representing the Decatur Battalion with Goodman band, the drum corps and Glee Club martial band, the Latham and Mt. Pleasant clubs. The party arrived at Lincoln at 8:10 o'clock, and were received with rousing cheers by the Logan clubs drawn up in line with blazing torches on both sides of the depot street. The procession formed at once and marched through the city, which was lavishly illuminated with Chinese lanterns, electric lights and lamps, making a fine display of the handsome residences, lawns and business houses. There was also a fine exhibition of fireworks, red and blue lights, and there was a big crowd in line to witness and applaud the demonstration, which laid the Democratic blow-out of the 21st in the shade. There were over 1500 men in line. The Decatur battalion visited the commodious home of Gov. Oglesby after the parade, when Goodman's band gave Mrs. Oglesby and daughter, Miss Ollie, a splendid serenade. Three rousing cheers were given for Old Dick and the hurrah came to a close. The Decatur party was liberally applauded along the route and many compliments were showered upon the Escort Club. During the afternoon Hon. Mr. Payson, candidate for congress in the Pontiac district, addressed a day meeting. There was no speaking at night.

WHAT THE REPUBLICANS ARE DOING AT MT. CLERY, ILL.
Mt. Clery, Ill., presented the Republican club of this place with an elegant banner. It is of the richest satin, blue on one side and red on the other. It is tastefully and elaborately decorated with exquisite metal trimmings and tassels, and is suspended by a beautiful brass rod. On it is inscribed the following in gilt: "Mt. Zion Republican Club," and "Blaine, Logan and Oglesby." Its cost was near $25. It is a lively banner, and the members of the club extend their most heartfelt thanks to Mr. Clery for the noble spirit which he has manifested and for his generosity and the respect with which he treated them.

The largest pole that we know of in this county was that reared last Saturday afternoon by the Republicans at Prairie Hall. It is 18 feet above the ground. It is probably the tallest pole of the National emblem of Truth and Union, that for which so many of our dear boys bled, fought and died, that of which no true loyal man or woman is ashamed; that of which no traitorous rebel dare or can boast, the glorious and great old stars and stripes. It was made by Mrs. Charles Fletcher, and is 22 feet long by 12 feet wide. At night the Prairie Hall boys, joined by the Mt. Zion club and others, held a general rally meeting and raised after parting away out doors the flag, they were called to order for a short time to listen to an address delivered by Mr. J. R. Mills of Decatur. He is an able and interesting speaker and all enjoyed hearing him very much. Mr. A. J. Daniel, chairman of the hour with his remarks. After which the Mt. Zion Glee Club favored them with a few songs. Then all departed for their respective homes in good humor, all having enjoyed themselves greatly, having been out and done to improve anybody's feelings. We are happy to say that quite a number of ladies were present. The Republican ladies are not ashamed of their colors. We are very grateful to Mr. and Mrs. Louis Koenig, of Logansport, Ind., who supplied them with the flag and who were very much pleased to see the flag flying so high.

Quite a number of our citizens are preparing to meet Logan when he comes to Decatur. Also we anticipate a grand Republican rally next Friday night, October 31st. Everyone is invited. More anon. DANIEL.

A serious rear-end collision on the Washab near Edwardsville occurred at four o'clock this morning. There were three coaches filled with emigrants attached to the second section of a freight train. The train accidentally separated and the third section of the freight ran into the emigrant train, before the brakeman could get back far enough to signal the approaching train which was rounding a curve. One coach was thrown from the track and a number of the emigrants more or less seriously hurt, but none killed.

THE ELEGANT GIFT OF DECATUR FRIENDS TO GOVERNOR OGLESBY.

It will be remembered that at the Catholic fair at the tabernacle last week a handsome gold-headed cane was voted to Gen. R. J. Oglesby by his Irish-American and other enthusiastic Decatur friends as the most popular candidate for governor. His opponent was Hon. Carter Harrison, the Democratic nominee. Votes worth 10 cents each, and Gen. Oglesby got 2933; Harrison, 1600; and when the hour's contest closed there was general cheering for Oglesby.

Gen. Oglesby spent Sunday in Decatur and left at 10 o'clock to-day for Vandalia. It was arranged that the cane should be presented the General before his departure, but owing to the illness of Rev. Father Mackin, who was to carry it, it could not perform the service in person. It was done by correspondence, the cane being given Gen. Oglesby at the residence of Hon. J. J. Paddock by Miss Emma Keets in the presence of a number of friends. The following is the letter of presentation from Father Mackin and the General's reply.

DECATUR, ILL., Oct. 27, 1894.
GEN. OGLESBY:—It affords me much pleasure, as Rector of St. Patrick's Church of this city, to present you the cane which was voted you at our fair, in the contest between yourself and the Hon. Carter Harrison, as to which was the most popular candidate for governor of Illinois. I feel that it goes to a worthy recipient on account of the many years' service rendered his country; and we trust this beautiful cane will always keep in memory your old Decatur home and friends. Y. J. MACKIN.

DECATUR, ILL., Oct. 27, 1894.
REV. FATHER MACKIN:—With great pleasure I accept this testimonial of esteem of my old neighbors and friends of Decatur. It adds to the pleasure of the occasion that you have kindly consented, as Rector of your church, to make the presentation.

If in conformity with the customs of your church, good has come to the cause of religion and education, through the friendly contest which resulted in this presentation, I assure you it increases the satisfaction I would naturally feel over such a result.

Thanking you, and through you your parishioners and my old friends of Decatur, I accept this cane, with sentiments of deepest gratitude. R. J. OGLESBY.

A card to the Tollers of Decatur.

A quiet discussion of the political issues involved in the presidential campaign now at hand is advertised to take place to-night at the tabernacle. The invitation is extended to all parties. The old parties knowing that no good can come to either of them from an exposition of their insincerity on the labor question, decline to take part in the meeting. The Democrats are invited on the contrary to go to the Eldorado hose house to listen to an account at the hands of Democratic orators of what a workingman's millennium would spring from a free trade dispensation. Do not be deceived. Let Wm. E. Nelson and C. O. Clark come to the tabernacle and present their arguments on free trade, and if they are sound and cannot be exploded then and there, let tollers vote for it at the polls.

THAT MUD HOLE.
EDS. REPUBLICAN:—I again call the attention of the city fathers to the mud hole in front of the Hotel Brunswick. By direction of the city the mud hole was made, then against my protest, and I now want them, before the winter sets in, to remedy the nuisance. I pay the city yearly a large city tax, and they have no right to mire or lessen the value of my property. Hacks and carriages have to stop five or six feet from the pavement when they bring a customer to the hotel on account of this mud hole. South Water street to Wood street on the west side is now a thoroughly business street, and in justice ought to have a reliable gutter from East Main to Wood on the west side. J. A. B. COSTA.

DIED.
At the Elm Grove farm, northwest of Decatur, of malarial fever at 1 a. m., Oct. 27, 1894, J. J. HARRIS, wife of George Smith, aged 66 years.

The funeral will take place from the residence to-morrow afternoon at 1 o'clock, Rev. Huxton officiating. The remains will be interred at Rolling Springs cemetery.
